Some Akufo-Addo appointees are corrupt - Prof. Martey

Government says businesses now have their best chance to succeed because their ambition is matched by a government which is private sector focused.

preliminary remarks at the opening of 2017 CEO's Summit Monday, Senior Minister Yaw Osafo Maafo told business leaders, fate has presented them a government that has a "tireless desire" to see them succeed.

Delivering an address on behalf of President Nana Akufo-Addo, the Senior Minister was happy to tell a "true story" to dramatise his belief that if corporate Ghana fails, then it must have been written in the stars.

A husband requiring surgery had always hoped that any of his two favourite surgeons would operate on him, he began his story.

Much to the patient's pleasant surprise, he got more than he had hoped as his two favourite surgeons all stood over him to conduct the surgery.

He christened this second NPP government as the "golden age of entrepreneurship". The first stay in power 2001 to 2008 was christened by President Kufuor as the "golden age of business".

Urging Ghanaian businesses to dream big, the Minister said the size of the ECOWAS market is waiting for the dominance of Ghanaian businesses.

The Senior Minister urged business leaders to be ethical, time conscious and pay their share of taxes.

Cutting corners 'is not quite right", he said.
